The most disastrous railway accident in the history of Alberta took place on Saturday evening at a point about 21 miles west of Edmonton on the Canadian Northern Railway, when an excursion train, loaded with trippers bound for a moonlight outing to Alberta Beach, collided, head-on, with a freight train proceeding in the opposite direction.

As a result of the collision five passengers on the excursion train were killed and at least two more were so seriously injured that their condition is highly critical. Besides these, twenty-two others were taken to the local hospitals, suffering more or less serious hurts, and nearly as many more people, who had experienced slighter injuries, were sent to their homes.

Scene of Disaster.

The accident occurred at 20 minutes to eight o'clock, at "Mile 21," three and one-half miles west of Villeneuve station on the Calahoo Indian Reserve, on a curve, where the track is bordered with heavy forest growth which prevented the engineers from seeing each other until it was too late to stop. Both engineers shut off steam and applied the air brakes; then, with their firemen, jumped for safety.

The excursion train, which was composed of a baggage car and five passenger coaches, being the lighter train, responded to the action of the brakes and, according to the testimony of all witnesses, was moving so slowly as to have practically stopped when the collision occurred. But the momentum of the freight train, being composed for the most part of heavily loaded coal and lumber cars, could not be checked so soon.

Came Together With Awful Force.

The two locomotives came together with awful force and, driven back by the weight and impetus of the freight, the heavy steel baggage car forced the leading passenger coach back into that which followed. The floor of the front coach sheered right through the front vestibule and wooden walls of the second coach, rising as it did so until it was fairly on top. Then the roof of the second coach gave way, allowing the first one to fall through on top of the helpless passengers who were penned in their seats.

It was in the second coach that most of the casualties occurred. The wonder is, to all who saw the shattered and splintered wreckage of the car, not that five were killed and a number injured, but that any escaped with their lives at all.

The two wrecked coaches were "colonist" cars of an old type, made of wood and quite unfitted to stand the pressure when driven back by the baggage car, a modern car of steel, against the remaining three coaches of the train, which were also new and strongly built. The two in the middle crunched together like a couple of paste-board boxes, while the others suffered but trifling damage.

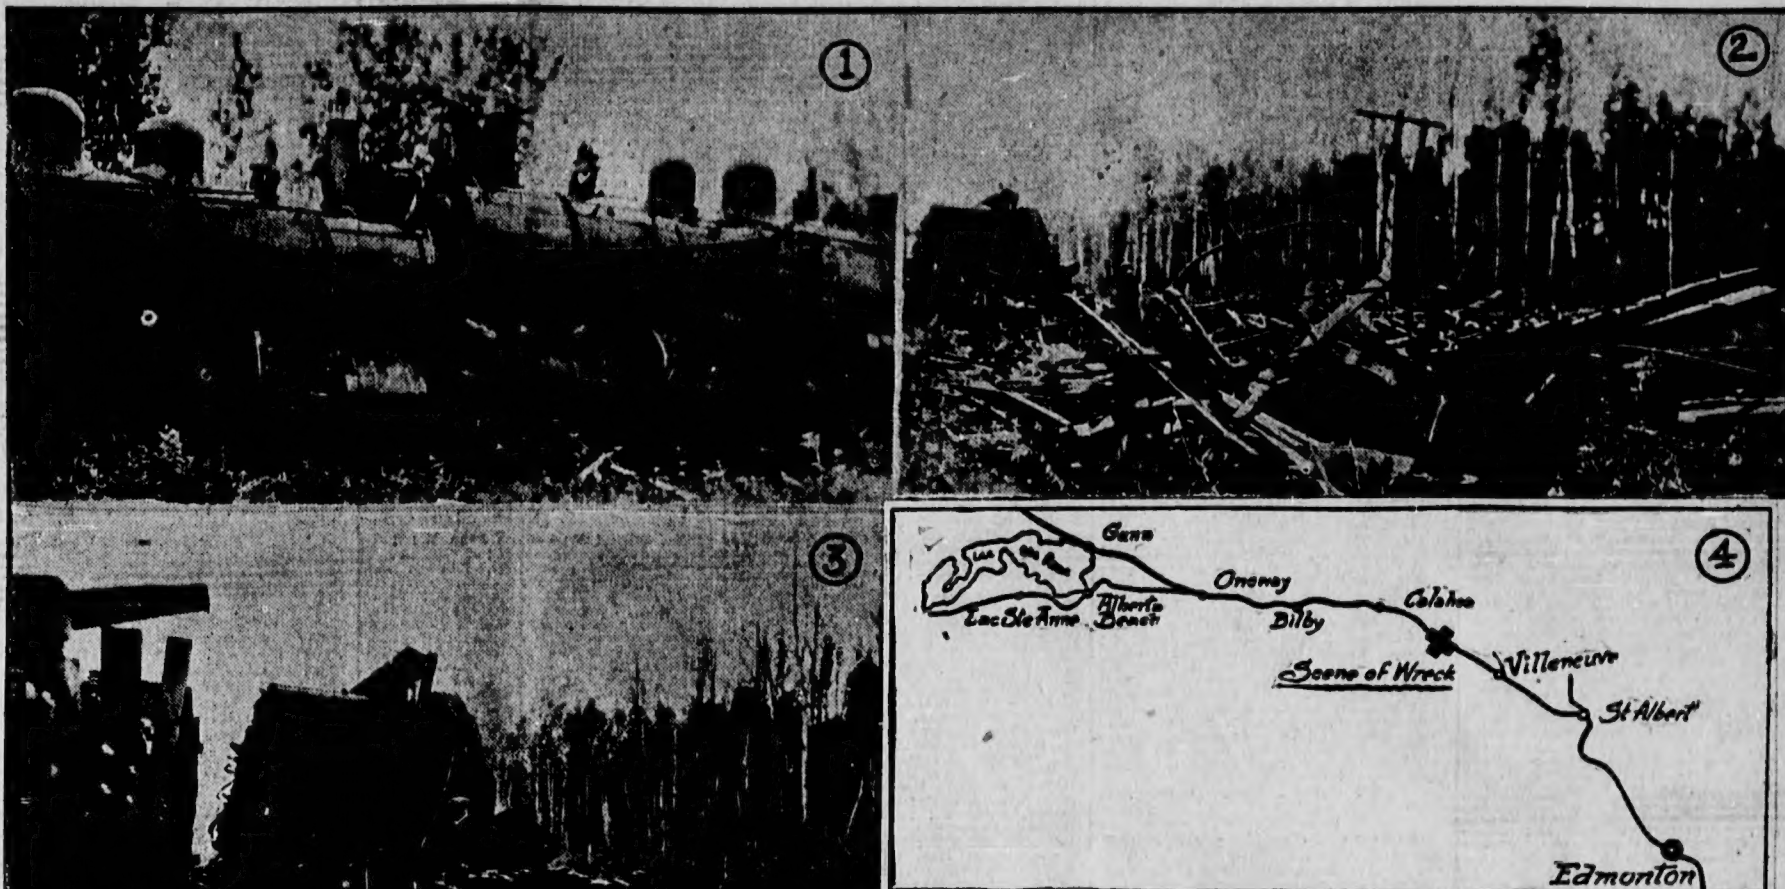

Rear Coaches Escaped

Several of those in the first coach were hurt, but those in the rear cars escaped with no injuries at all. Many of them, in fact, were unaware at the time that there had been an accident at all.

For a moment after the crash, there was silence. Then from the two wrecked coaches came the screams and cries of the injured. The two cars lay in a huddle of ruin. As soon as they had recovered themselves enough to realize what had happened the trainmen and uninjured passengers, including many whose injuries were not severe, set to work with a will to rescue the unfortunate. Many of them were pinned down by the wreckage and it took some vigorous work to free them. The victims bore their pain bravely. In fact, after the first outburst, the cries soon subsided and only a few groans,

Supt. Brown will Not Attach Blame Till After Inquiry

Gives Emphatic Denial to Story That Despatcher Has Left City.

A warrant is out for the C. N. R. telegraph operator in the train dispatchers' office who is believed to be responsible for the wrecking of the Lac Ste. Anne excursion train Saturday night with the loss of five lives. This information was given to The Bulletin last night by Inspector Schurer of the Provincial Police, who said that the man had "gone." The inspector declined to give the operator's name, as it might compromise the work of the police in locating the wanted man.

"All that I am interested in," said Inspector Schurer, "is the cause of the accident and the condition of the injured."

"Are you satisfied as to the cause?" asked The Bulletin.

"Orders," answered the inspector, "were given."

"Wrong orders" was asked.

"Lack of orders," replied the inspector. And that was all.

"The investigation will explain the whole thing," said A. Brown, Canadian Northern superintendent, discussing the tragedy late Sunday afternoon. The official's eyes were heavy with sleep and he was just about to retire, having been on duty since Friday morning. The superintendent refused to attach blame to anyone for the occurrence and then gave emphatic denial to a rumor that an official of the dispatching department had fled the city following the wreck. "There is absolutely no foundation to such a story," said Mr. Brown. "I deny it absolutely."

Mr. Brown then intimated that the cloud covering the smash-up would be cleared by the inquest of Dr. A. Forin which will be opened at the undertaking parlors of Connelly & McKinley Co. at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon. A jury will be sworn in and the bodies of the victims will then be viewed.

An official investigation will be conducted by Canadian Northern traffic and passenger heads. The sittings will be held privately, but it is expected that the company will issue a statement in fairness to the public at the close of the hearings.

GERMANS FEAR NOW IS OF DYSENTERY

(By Morning Bulletin Leased Wire)

THE HAGUE, July 29.—(Via London)—Mannheim papers publish the admission of serious public uneasiness occasioned by the spread of dysentery in the city. The city authorities have issued a warning that a dysentery epidemic is threatened, and elaborate precautions are ordered. Berlin and Bremen papers already hinted at a dysentery epidemic. It is now admitted that conditions look serious.

ROYAL ALEXANDRA HOSPITAL NURSES DID MAGNIFICENT WORK AT WRECK AND UPON RETURN

When Call Came For Assistance Five Were Sent Out On Relief Train—Preparations Made At Hospital To Accommodate Injured—Building Is Thronged With Anxious Inquirers On Sunday.

The Royal Alexandra hospital did magnificent work in taking care of the injured, and the entire staff, under the efficient direction of Miss Campbell, the superintendent, worked with loyalty and devotion to alleviate, as far as possible, the sufferings of the victims of the accident. When the call came, at 8 o'clock, five nurses were sent out on the relief train. They were: Miss alter, Miss Irving, Miss Macdonald, Miss Hurst and Miss Clark, and they did able work.

Meanwhile at the hospital every preparation possible was made to accommodate the injured when they should arrive. In every room and ward where there was a vacancy, twenty-one cots were set up in the corridors even. The whole staff, day and night, nurses, orderlies and all other help, remained on duty. When the ambulances began to drive up with the victims, the beds were ready and every case was promptly disposed of and the waiting doctors and nurses took up the job of caring for them where the first aid administered at the scene of the wreck and the relief train had left them. Some were taken to the operating room

Dr. Whitelaw is Among First to Help Injured

Dr. T. H. Whitelaw, city medical officer, who was homeward bound on the Vancouver express, held up at Calahoo by the wreck, was one of the first medical men to reach the scene of the disaster and, in company with Dr. Rogers, of Dauphin, Man., of the C. N. R. medical staff, who also happened to be on the express, did good work before the relief train with the doctors and nurses from Edmonton arrived.

"We were held up at Calahoo," said Dr. Whitelaw to The Bulletin, "until news that there had been a wreck began to be circulated about. The conductor, who knew me and Dr. Rogers, made up a little relief party and we proceeded to the scene. I happened to have my satchel with me, which is not usually the case, and I can assure you that the medicines I contained were of the greatest value. I was able to give hypodermic injections to several of the injured who were suffering and possibly to have saved some of their lives."

"When we got there, things were looking pretty bad. They had got out most of the injured from the wrecked train, but a number of them were greatly in need of attention. When the doctors arrived on the special, they were well equipped with everything necessary and handled the situation well."

"I want to pay a tribute to the way the people on that wrecked train behaved. There was no panic, no outcry. Everyone was calm and kept their wits about them. There were a number of young girls who had been slightly injured themselves, who, instead of collapsing and having hysterics, went about as if nothing had occurred, doing their best to assist those who were more seriously hurt."

BULLETIN MAN IN ILL-FATED CAR DESCRIBES COLLISION AND NARROW ESCAPES OF OCCUPANTS

Magnificent Fortitude Was Displayed By Suffering Ones Both Male And Female—When Trains Struck, Flying Glass And Splinters Filled The Air, While Many Were Killed Or Pinned Down By Grinding Timber.

(By Bulletin Staff Member on the Wrecked Train)

Never before in the history of railway transportation in Edmonton has there been such a tragedy as that which occurred on Saturday night, when a holiday crowd bound for a few hours relaxation and enjoyment, was thrown into the presence of death and suffering by a head-on collision, which was responsible for five deaths and a large number of injured, many being hurt very seriously.

By a stroke of fate the Bulletin man was represented on the wrecked train by a member of his own staff, and is able to give a personal narrative of the dire happenings and some of the most sad features. Guy Deaton, who was a member of the Bulletin staff, was on the train bound to join his wife at Alberta Beach, and it fell to his lot to occupy a seat in the second coach, where all of the fatalities occurred. Personally he escaped with some bruises and a severe shaking, but he tells a heart-rending story of the misfortunes of his fellow-passengers.

There has been bright news in the tale and that is the magnificent fortitude and courage displayed by the sufferers, both male and female, and the passengers in general.

"It was splendid," says the Bulletin man, "there was little screaming or hysterics, or undue excitement. After the shock everyone who was able scrambled out as best they could and immediately set to work to relieve those less fortunate. It was wonderful what was done, those who had a knowledge of first aid made the greatest use of it, their efforts only being curtailed by lack of material for dressings and bandages."

Rain Kept Many Home

Proceeding to narrate the complete story of the wreck, the Bulletin man said: "There was a good load on the train, but owing to the rain which fell about the time of starting many who intended to go out to the Beach for the evening abandoned the idea at the last minute. They came to the depot, but as the storm threatened to continue, allowed the train to depart without them, for which, doubtless, they thanked their lucky stars. Seemingly the majority of the passengers were those bound to spend the week-end with their families or friends already in residence at the beach, and many were loaded up with supplies. There were several women with families of young children and there was a party of young people from the Westminster church. We got off without any special incident, and for a time I went well, the train making average speed."

A Fortunate Move

Then occurred one of those incidents which always seem to point to Providence in these affairs. "The accident occurred about 7:50," went on the speaker, "and shortly before that time a friend, W. Giddy, and myself were standing on the platform of the first coach when he suggested that as it was not very pleasant in that spot we should go farther back. We did so and went to the rear of the second coach, taking seats on the side benches. Had we remained in the original position we could hardly have escaped fatal or very severe injuries. At this time we were about 21 miles from Edmonton passing through the Calahoo Indian reserve. Here the grade is level the roadbed fairly on a level with the ground on either side, which is covered with bush and timber with some slough. We had been in our seat places for some few minutes and were talking when we noticed the train slowing down. This was as we were rounding a curve at a point about 3 1/2 miles west of Villeneuve station.

"Then suddenly there was a shock, perhaps not so big as one might imagine, but accompanied with a nasty sound and feeling of grinding and sliding. The first intimation that anything serious had occurred was that the noise of smashing wood and iron began to mingle with the grinding sensation, and with a crash the rear end of the first car began to break through the front of that in which we were seated. Shattered glass was flying everywhere, cutting and wounding faces and heads. Through the opening in front made by the impact of the two coaches there was a vision of people in the front car and those in the forward portion of ours being thrown hither and thither helplessly, struck down or being pinned by the broken and flying wood and iron. The two cars just telescoped completely. The first car split and heaved up, its roof landing on the top of ours, and the whole of the first car came along above the flooring of ours, shearing off and smashing everything in its wake. Right and left people were felled and held down by the wreckage. What happened for a few seconds one could not say, as we were all mixed up in a confused heap. There was some shouting and screams, but on the whole the signs of life showed marvelous self-restraint, even at the worst moment."

A Sorry Spectacle

"When the motion ceased, a sorry spectacle met the eye. All around were the injured, most of them held by fallen broken woodwork or iron. Some were showing signs of life; others were lying quiet, with a stillness full of foreboding. Those who were able, scrambled out by throwing aside the wreckage, and one could easily get out of the car, as the back was completely gone."

"The first business was help for the injured. One man who had a broken arm was fixed up and his arm put in splints by the advertising manager of James Ramsey, Ltd., who has a knowledge of first aid. The most difficult cases were those under the fallen timber and iron. Miss Donella Fraser, a plucky seventeen-year-old girl, was pinned down by a beam across her back and had to wait in this position for half an hour before the weight could be lifted by means of jacks. She bore up splendidly and when released was found to be uninjured, save a scalp wound that needed medical attention. She fainted when got out, but this was not to be wondered at considering the strain."

S. H. Smith, of the Swift Canadian Company, was another held down in such manner and he was badly hurt. When got out, the dead body of a pretty little girl was found beside him, a sight that moved everybody. Alex. Currie was thought to be dead when taken out, but finding signs of life, we worked over him for hours before the medical men pronounced the case hopeless. He bore little sign of injury, save marks on the knees and side of the head. His brother Archie was Miss Grace Hicks of Viking, who has been spending a week with her cousin, Mrs. Geo. Smith, is visiting in Edmonton en route for Vancouver.

The French Students Club held a meeting on Friday evening, when matters relating to the preceding month were reviewed. The members present passed a motion that in view of the number of people on vacation just now, the classes be suspended.

The Daily Poem

"JUST A BOY."

I often meditate at dusk,
Of days when just a boy
I'd wander through the fields and woods—
What wondrous times I had!

I loved a shallow little brook,
That mirrored birch trees tall.
That babbled over smooth-worn stones
to form a waterfall.

I loved to watch the red squirrels
Among the friendly trees,
Or search for fish in deeper pools,
Upon my bended knees.

I often chased fair butterflies,
That sometimes flitted by,
Or watched the hungry blackbird
An insect in the sky.

I used to dream beneath the shade
Of some old spreading tree
And wonder as the days flew by
Just what I'd like to be.

If I could have Aladdin's lamp
To wish for untold joy,
I'd rub the lamp and wish—
That I were "just a boy."

North Cooking Lake

Still they come in crowds and crowds by road and rail to enjoy the boating, bathing and lake breezes so invigorating and refreshing in these days of tropical intensity.

During the past week in addition to the regular patrons, visitors and campers, we had two large parties of excursionists. On Thursday there was the big picnic of the Farmers' association when a special from Wainwright brought close on 300 people from that district and intermediate stations. The party had a most delightful day, an interesting program of races, sports and games being negotiated while the opportunity for boating, swimming and attempting to swim was fully availed of.

A few days previously we had a large excursion from Namsa, when a dozen automobiles brought over sixty residents of the Surgeon to inhale the breezes, and quaff the ozone of the "lake district." The picnic was an immense success and the party were delighted with the day's outing.

A returned soldier's picnic is being organized by the ladies of the south side for Wednesday, August 1, when it is expected that a most enjoyable treat will be provided for about fifty war veterans. Autos for the accommodation of the soldiers are earnestly requested from the owners of cars.

The Y. M. C. A. are making final arrangements for the opening of the boys' summer camp at Oban Beach next week. It may be remembered that the boys held their camp here two years ago when a delightful holiday was spent.

SECOND FAIRBANKS FILM FOR ARTCRAFT AT MONARCH

The most popular exponent of the smile, Douglas Fairbanks, will be seen on the screen at the Monarch theatre all this week in his second film for the Artcraft Corporation, "Wild and Woolly." John Emerson is the producer, and Anita Loos and "Wild and Woolly" was made.

It is said of Fairbanks that he practiced more difficult stunts for his latest film than for all his other feature films combined. He has shown his ability to do something new and more startling than his last stunt that many times during the filming of "Wild and Woolly." Director Emerson feared for the life of his charge.

The action starts in New York and ends in California. The picture discloses a variety of metropolitan and western scenes presenting the proper background for the story. As the youth of metropolitan birth who finally realizes his ambition to ride the plains of the West across a lightning broncho, Fairbanks offers a wonderfully effective pictorialization in the role of Jeff Harrington. Jeff's visions of life in the West are based entirely upon the gaudy colors of ten-cent weeklies which he has been reading since early boyhood. He pictures the west today exactly as photographs show it to have been in the early eighties. Friends in Arizona plan to live up to his expectations and to their surprise things turn out more seriously than they anticipated. The story ends after many amusing as well as thrilling situations, with Jeff as the man of the hour.

Behind the Footlights

What the Advance Man Says

THREE HEADLINES AT THE PANTAGES
The Pantages theatre this week boasts of no less than three acts of headline calibre, a musical act with an assortment of girls, a dramatic sketch and two Western comedians who have been here before but never fail to please.

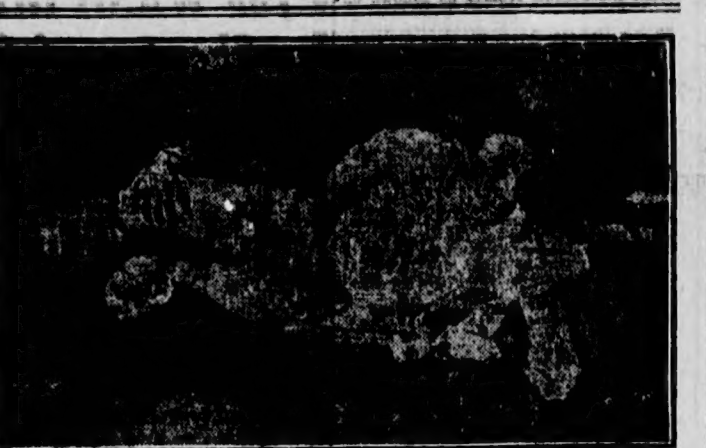

"Miss America" is said to be the most plausible patriotic act that has been turned out by the song-smiths since the United States entered the Great War. The scene is laid outside a female recruiting station conveniently placed near the stage door of the "Pantages," and the placards involving the girls to step and join are in evidence everywhere.

Frederick H. Spore is not a stranger to the legitimate stage, but he is new to Edmonton. On his first tour of the Pantages circuit he offers "Everyman's Sister," a tense dramatic playlet presented by what is said to be a first class company. De Michelle Brothers must be seen again by those who have already learned of their combination of infectious comedy and luring music, while others may anticipate a good laugh or two.

Chester Gruber is a comedian, the Girl from Starland presents an aerial novelty and the Universal Weekly is said to abound in more good things.

U.S. BARQUE IS VICTIM.

Notice: Film Patrons

"WILD AND WOOLLY" the latest and best feature film bearing the name of Douglas Fairbanks as star, comes to the Monarch theatre starting Monday for showing of 6 days. The Monarch management calls the attention of the theatre-going public to the fact that Mr. Fairbanks is identified only with the Artcraft Corporation now and the product of any other corporation shown is merely a re-issue of an old copy of a picture manufactured by a company which no longer makes Fairbanks films. Mr. Fairbanks is acknowledged by competent critics to be the most popular male film player in America today. His fame has spread throughout the civilized world and the finish of the Fairbanks features has become so inseparably identified with ARTCRAFT that discriminating film patrons always look for the ARTCRAFT trade mark when they see Fairbanks advertised. ARTCRAFT means exactly what the title implies, ART and the highest form of ART in motion pictures.

Publicity men tell of current attractions on the Screen in Local Picture Houses

EMPRESS—Douglas Fairbanks' big screen success, "The Americano," is at the Empress theatre today, Tuesday and Wednesday and in the course of the thrilling story that is told this hero of the screen is given an exceptional chance to display the unusual talents with which he is endowed. Here is a short synopsis of the story that will give an idea of what to expect from the genial "Doug." He is the central figure, Blaise Derringer, a young American engineer who signs a contract to open the mines in Paragonia, a Central American republic, after thirteen years of waiting. He is accompanied by the beautiful daughter of President Hernandez de Castellar, who has accompanied her father's embassy to New York. When Blaise arrives in Paragonia he finds the republic in a ferment. The old president has been deposed by the treachery of Salva Espada, minister of war, and his family is imprisoned in their home. Alberto de Castellar, one of the supporters of Castellar, meets Blaise in the guise of a match seller and warns him of the treacherous state of affairs. After some difficulties, during which he enlists the aid of one Harold White, an American negro, Blaise succeeds in having an interview with the president. He tells of the desperate plight of his father, who is held in a dungeon, overruling the protesting of his wife and sister. He tells him out. Meanwhile the villainous Espada has promised the hand of Juana to a native native colonel named Lizarra. He has also attempted to bribe Blaise, "The Americano," with a small fortune but he has stolen from the army's payroll. Salva has arranged the marriage to take place before the entire population. Just as the hour set, however, Blaise and White succeed in liberating the president, who is really the idol of the people, and after an exciting battle they make their way to the balcony of the palace, where they confront Salva with his treachery. The army turns against him, and Blaise marries Juana, and the story ends with the stirring scenes of Paragonia, who have become his devoted followers. On the same program is a Keystone Comedy, "Hobbed Hearts."

MORE AMERICAN TROOPS LAND AT EUROPEAN PORT

A European Port, July 28.—Another American contingent has safely arrived and disembarked.

The American troops arrived by the steamer wheron Kermit Roosevelt, his wife and child travelled. When tenders went alongside the vessel Friday the men were in high spirits and frequently shouted "Are we downhearted?" which was answered with a roar. "No" given with great enthusiasm. Representatives of the general staff watched the arrival and prohibition. There was no civic demonstration. Only a few spectators knew of the landing. These cheered and the troops cheered back. The men entrained quickly and left for their new quarters. A signal company remained at port for some hours and these were the only representatives of the contingent which the public saw.

BREAKING BRONCHO CAN BE OVERDONE

Magistrate Fines Man $10 Who Subdued Animal by Cruel Methods

Russell Wilson was convicted in police court Saturday morning on a charge of cruelty to a horse and fined $10 and costs. The magistrate gave for his reason in imposing a small fine that the accused had not been guilty of intentional cruelty but had used improper methods in the breaking of a wild broncho which had resulted in undue suffering by the animal.

MONEY AND MARKETS

WHEAT AND OATS EAGERLY SOUGHT: CASH WHEAT 2.41

Some Changed Hands Half Point Higher—October Wheat at 2.30

Winnipeg, July 28.—The usual traders were in the pit today for wheat and oats. The market again displayed additional strength and prices were higher all around. Cash wheat changed hands at 2 1/4 basis, 1 1/2 higher than yesterday. October wheat was bid up to 230, 1 1/2c higher. The Government wheat, which only taking a small quantity of the lower grades. Mixing houses were in the market for the cheaper classes and the millers were also among the buyers. The demand for oats is still active. There is little doing in barley. The flax market is also dull, so far as trading is concerned, in spite of the advanced prices. Holders refuse to let go.

Winnipeg cash wheat closed 1c below yesterday. Winnipeg October wheat closed 1 1/2c higher. July oats closed 1/2c down, October 5/8c lower and December 5/8c down. July flax closed 1/2c higher; October 5/8c up and December 5/8c up. July barley closed unchanged.

Trading was slow at the opening this morning. There were no quotations for any of the wheat markets during the early part of the session. Winnipeg July oats opened at 80, 1/2c higher than yesterday's close; October opened 5/8c higher at 79 1/2 and December 1 1/2c higher at 81 1/2 and October 2c at 81 1/2.

Adventures of Uncle Wiggily

Uncle Wiggily and the Sun Flower

Copyright, 1917, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"Where are you going now?" asked Nurse Jane Fussy Wuzzy, the muskrat lady housekeeper, of Uncle Wiggily Longears, the rabbit gentleman, one day.

"Out in the garden to hoe down the weeds that are choking my cabbage and turnips," answered the bunny uncle. "I want my garden to grow well."

And while Uncle Wiggily was hoeing away he suddenly heard, down at the end of his garden in a thick tangle of briars and thistles, a voice, saying:

"Oh, read; I don't see how I am ever to grow up nice and tall and big in a place like this. I am being choked to death by the weeds!"

"My goodness!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily, leaning on his hoe handle to rest himself, and taking off his tall silk top hat with which he fanned his pink twinkling nose. "That sounds like some of my friends in trouble. Perhaps it is one of my cabbages, or carrots, planted by mistake in among the weeds. I must take a look."

So the bunny uncle looked and he found, growing down at the end of his garden, a sunflower. But it was very small, because there were so many weeds around it that the flower could not get plenty of light, air and sunshine, which all flowers need to make them grow.

"Oh, ho!" cried jolly Uncle Wiggily. "I see what the trouble is."

"And can you help me?" asked the flower.

"Surely," answered the bunny uncle. Then he hoed away the weeds, and loosened up the dirt around the flower so the air could get down to the roots.

"Thank you!" said the sun blossom, nodding in the wind and making a polite bow. "This is fine! Now I shall grow tall and big. You'll hardly know me next time you see me. I bow! I thank you!"

And the flower bowed again as Uncle Wiggily went on hoeing his garden.

Now it happened, as it often does in this world, that about a week after that the bunny rabbit uncle had to go to the store for Nurse Jane after supper, and when it was dark one night, Nurse Jane forgot to bake bread and Mr. Longears had to go to the store for loaf.

"But I don't mind in the least," he said. "I'm not at all afraid, and perhaps I may have an adventure. Who knows? I shall take along my little pocket electric flash light to see my way out if I get into a place that is too dark."

So off started brave Uncle Wiggily, and surely enough he did have an adventure.

When he was coming from the store and had reached the lower end of his garden, near his hollow stump bungalow, all at once a great big bat flew down out of a tree and grabbed him.

"Here, you!" cried the bat, bold and impudently. "Give me that loaf of bread!"

"Oh, no, I can't," answered Uncle Wiggily. "It's for Nurse Jane."

And the bunny held it with both paws. "What do I care?" inquired the bat, still more impudently. "If you don't give me the loaf, I'll take the light, and you, too, off to my den!"

And being a big bat and strong, he began to do this, dragging Uncle Wiggily after him by long, hooked claws on the underside of his wings.

For this was not a baseball bat or stick, you know, but a flying bat animal, something like a big rat with wings like a bird's, for that's what a bat is.

"Please let me go!" begged Uncle Wiggily of the bat.

"No!" snarled the unpleasant creature, which only flies at night because in daylight the sun blinds its eyes so it can't see. "No, I'll not let you go!"

"Oh, yes you will, too! You'll let my friend Uncle Wiggily go!" suddenly cried a new voice.

"Who says so?" asked the bat, surly like.

"I, the big, bright, yellow sunflower, Uncle Wiggily, shine out the electric light on me and see what happens!"

Then the brave rabbit gentleman flashed his pocket electric lamp on the face of the big sunflower he had saved from being choked to death by the weeds. And the electric light made the flower look just as if the morning sun was rising. The bat saw this, for the flower looked him full in the face, and he cried:

"Oh, I'm blind! I'm blind! It's daylight, for the sun has risen, and I'll have to let Uncle Wiggily go!" And he had to. But the sun hadn't risen at all—it was only the sun's rays shining in the dark.

So the bat flapped away, banging into trees, because he couldn't see in the flashlight glare of the big yellow flower, and Uncle Wiggily was once more saved, and very thankful he was.

And if the mucliac bottle doesn't try to get a drink of water from the ink well and fall in, it will tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the wasp.

SCOUT MASTERS DIE, BOYS SWIM ASHORE; STORM UPSET BOAT

Returned Soldier Loses Life in Lake Winnipeg During a Gale

Winnipeg, July 28.—Scoutmaster William Aitken, a returned soldier, and Assistant Scoutmaster Wm. Coates, of Winnipeg, were drowned last night in Lake Winnipeg, near Grand Beach, when their rowboat was swamped during a gale. Two boy scouts who were with them managed to swim to shore. The bodies of the scout leaders have not yet been recovered.

NEED 25,000 MEN TO HELP ON CROP

Canadian Northern Railway Says That Many Will Be Required

Winnipeg, July 27.—The Canadian Northern Railway has issued a report which estimates that 25,000 men will be required for extra help in harvesting the crop along its lines in the west this season. Reports from agents of the railway indicate that practically every point requires extra help for the harvest, and that in the majority of cases farmers are willing to pay $3.00 a day to harvesters.

ONTARIO FARMER GORED TO DEATH

Attempts to Put in Nose Ring Maddened Bull, Which Used Its Horns

London, Ont., July 28.—David Henry Carroll was gored to death by a bull early yesterday on a farm near Whitebridge, Hamilton road. The bull, suddenly by an attempt to pierce its nostril with a nose ring, turned on Mr. Carroll and drove a horn through his right lung, death being almost instantaneous.

CHECK JOY-RIDING TO SAVE GASOLINE

Fuel Controller May Start Something if Needless Trips Are Taken

Ottawa, July 28.—Dramatic action may be taken to prevent automobile joy-riding, in order to conserve the gasoline supply for the needs of the army in England and France, and of necessary industries in Canada, particularly western agriculture, which is beginning to absorb vast quantities of gasoline for power purposes. The matter is now being considered by C. A. Magrath, fuel controller, and if his investigations of the situation prove the need of economy, he will not hesitate to take action to curb the use of gasoline for needless automobile riding.
